Artist Biography

Bryony Phipps-Wardle is a designer, maker and researcher working in knit. Phipps-Wardle graduated the Royal College of Art in 2019; her developed methodology centres around the traceability of materials and responsible design and making. Traditional knit techniques are re-interpreted using a combination of hand and machine processes to create knitwear for a unisex market. Her practice has a strong material narrative and is interested in lesser told stories.

Here, the artist has designed a playful twist on classic football scarves, imagining our NHS as the ultimate team we can all support.
